after all is only the form and thought—develops upon such suggestion as nature is ever silently offering us out of her boundless store—suggestions never ceasing until we cease to care to see.

THE SONG OF THE LARK

(ART INSTITUTE, CHICAGO)

Dear maiden, with uplifted face
And eyes in joyous reverence raised,
Far o'er the realms of song-thrilled space
Thy soul soars upward with the lark.

Thy rugged hand a sickle holds—
Death's symbol clasped by dawning life—
A rosy light thy form enfolds,
A new, earth-born Aurora thou.

Thy spirit is not peasant born,
Though night's pale dew clings round thy feet;

Forever on thee shines the morn,
Still in thy heart life's matin rings.
